Orland Auto Dealer and 16 Year Old Telephone Operator In Mysterious Disappearance

Orland is in the throes of scandal all its own, since Miss Mable Rust, 16 year old telephone operator, and John A. McGovern, mysteriously disappeared on July 5th.

On the morning of July 5th Miss Rust left her home and took a Wabash train to Chicago, ostensibly to visit her aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Zarnes, but she failed to arrive.

On the same morning McGovern left in a car, ostensibly to visit his sick wife who is in a Northern Wisconsin health resort, and he also has failed to show up.

When Edward J. Rust father of the girl learned of this he appealed to Assistant States' Attorney, Marie Andresen in Chicago to take up a search for the missing couple.

Mr. Rust who is employed as bookkeeper for the Orland Motor Co., of which McGovern is the manager, claims he did not know that his daughter had seen McGovern.

When interviewed by the News-Bulletin Thursday morning Mr. Rust said that so far no trace has been found of the couple, but that if they are located, he will prosecute McGovern to the limit of the law, and send his daughter to the house of correction. Mr. Rust thinks the couple went south.

The car driven by McGovern, is a Ford two door sedan, bearing license no. 815 issued to a dealer, and its motor number is 11832499.

Information can be reported to Miss Andresen, Phone, Chicago Franklin 2684.

Tinley May Buy Chemical Truck

Farmers around Tinley Park as well as the residents of Tinley Park are much interested in the move now on foot for the purchase of a chemical fire fighting motor truck. The plan is to get as many farmers in the vicinity of Tinley Park to agree to pay a certain portion toward the cost of the fire apparatus which will cost about $3,000 or more. The farmers who will take such an interest will all be benefited by having fire protection as this fire truck could be used on any farm in case of fire.

The village of Tinley Park will share in the cost of the apparatus if enough farmers can be secured who will be willing to subscribe for a fund with which to purchase the outfit.

On Saturday evening of this week at 6 o'clock a chemical motor truck will be demonstrated in Tinley Park and all farmers of this section as well as the town people are invited to witness the demonstration.

If a chemical truck should be bought it would mean a big safeguard against fire loss. The village has a good local fire department, but the water mains do not extend to all parts of the incorporated parts of the village, so the addition of a chemical truck would insure a 100 per cent fire protection.

Tinley Lutherans To Picnic Sunday

The annual picnic of the Zion Lutheran church will be held Sunday morning, July 19th at the Vogt Woods 1/2 mile east of Tinley Park. A brief church service will be held in the grove in the morning by Rev. A. Buddenhagen at the usual church hour.

There will be games of all kinds and plenty of ice cream, cake, sandwiches, etc., will be served. Every one is cordially invited to attend and enjoy a good outing.

Woodbox On Fire

Mokena had a fire scare Thursday morning, when a wood box in an up stairs room of the Barnes building caught fire. This room is occupied by Mr. Barnes who had just left the place. Mrs. Otto Marquardt, who lives in the flat below was in the garden and smelled smoke and looking about, saw heavy puffs coming from the upstairs. She at once gave an alarm and help quickly arrived. Upon breaking in the door the wood box was found to be afire. The blaze was quickly put out and only slight damage resulted.

The Christ Lutheran church of Orland will hold their annual church picnic at the old Wagner Grove Sunday afternoon and evening July 26th. There will be a base ball game with other sports and stunts and music by a band. Plenty of refreshments will be on the grounds. Everyone is invited.

PICNIC NETS $500

School Board Is Seeking Sentiment On 3rd Year High

The Mokena School Board is preparing to inaugurate a third year high school course for the coming school year, but before they proceed further, according to Ona E. McGovney, clerk of the Board, the school trustees request that the parents who wish to have their children take the third year high school course, would notify the Board so they will know how many students can be expected to enroll. If there is only a small number, say three or four enroll, it will not be worth while to put on the extra course, so the Board is anxious to know just where they are at before they put on this additional course. Parents who expect to have their children enroll for this course should notify either, Elmer Cooper, president of the Board, or Ona E. McGovney, clerk.

Elmer L. Cooper, Mokena Ford Dealer, has returned from a trip thru the great Ford plant at Detroit. Mr. Cooper says the plant covers 1,000,000 sq. ft. of territory than all of Mokena put together. Special guides are furnished to the visitors thru the plant, but in order to see all of it, it would take three weeks time.

Mr. Cooper also went to Ontario Canada and reports that the much talked about "good beer" is no different than the American "near beer."

Having represented Martha Nemeth as her solicitor, and in all fairness to Henry Bormet and his parents, I believe it my duty to deny that the tenant Mr. Larimore occupied the Nemeth farm at solicitation and arrangement of Henry Bormet. Only after Steve Nemeth left for California, giving all his property to his wife, naturally her brother and father attended to all farm work, and acted as her agent with her consent and approval, finally leased the farm to the tenant, which upon reconciliation, was surrendered by the tenant upon satisfactory arrangements and settlement.

To my knowledge, Henry Bormet and parents had in mind and at heart the welfare and interest of the daughter and diligently labored for her benefit.

SECRETARY LIKES THE RODEO

In the West he's "Bill." But in official Washington he's William Marion Jardine, secretary of agriculture, a member of President Coolidge's official "family." Secretary Jardine has been invited to attend the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo, to be held for nine days, beginning August 15. Those who know him say that he will be on hand for this greatest of all cowboy contests, as Secretary Jardine has not lost the spirit of the West where, years ago, he rode the range and punched cattle with the best of them.

Back in Idaho they like to tell how the secretary of agriculture busted bronchos and threw a rope. They're proud of their "Bill" and they're willing to wager that he could ride into the arena at the Chicago Rodeo and make some of the expert cowhands hustle for honors. The competitions will be held under the direction of Tex Austin for the world's championship titles belts and trophies and $30,000, the largest cash purses paid anywhere.

Frankfort Objects Having Colored Colony As New Next Door Neighbors

Citizens of Frankfort registered a forceful protest against the close proximity of the proposed Liberia colored colony at a redhot mass meeting held last night (Thursday) in the street in front of the Folkers market.

Wm. Lankenau, supervisor of Frankfort township served as chairman of the gathering which was attended by hundreds of people. He stated that the committee of seven appointed last week to investigate the transfer of the Scheer farm located a mile and a half east of the village of Frankfort on the Lincoln Highway to a colored colony, had carefully gone over all the phases of the deal and that Attorney A. H. Krusemark had secured some important information regarding the deal in question and he then asked Attorney Krusemark to state the result of his investigation.

Not One Cent Paid Down

In his address Attorney Krusemark set forth the following: Last week Monday a rumor became current that the Scheer farm consisting of 220 acres had been sold to the Liberia Land & Development Company of Chicago for colored colonization purposes. Immediately steps were taken by the citizens of Frankfort to see what could be legally done to frustrate the successful prosecution of this project, it being contended that should a colored colony be established so close to Frankfort, property values would decrease fully 50 per cent.

Accordingly a meeting was called last Tuesday and a committee of seven of the leading men of Frankfort consisting of Wm. Lankenau, chairman, Mayor Max F. Haass, Dr. W. V. Hedges, Dr. McEwan, Ben Mager, Joseph McGlashen and Attorney Krusemark was appointed to look into the matter.

It was learned that Mrs. Chas. Rahm of Frankfort and her brother Herman Scheer of Milwaukee had disposed of their farm thru a Chicago realtor by the name of Gustave Buckhardt who in turn sold the property to the Harberer Company for colored colonization purposes. The committee called on Mrs. Rahm and asked her for information regarding the deal which was closed on July 6th and to see the papers regarding the transaction, but she would not give the committee any worth while information.

The next day Attorney Krusemark and Joseph McGlashen went to the office of Harberer & Co., in Chicago regarding the farm deal.

Here they were met by Andrew J. Lane, one of the head promoters of the proposed colored settlement who stated his company had a signed agreement of trust and deed to the Scheer farm from both Mrs. Chas. Rahm and her brother, Herman Scheer, the condition of the agreement being that the colored colony promoters are to develop 40 acres at a time and after these 40 acres have been laid out in lots and sold both Mr. Scheer and his sister are to be paid $500 per acre for the land developed and the same plan is to be used until the whole farm has been sold. But neither Mr. Scheer nor his sister, Mrs. Rahm have received one red cent down payment on their farm. Asked as to what the provisions were in case the entire farm is not developed, Mr. Lane said the undeveloped land would revert back to the original owners.

Says Railroads Will Build Spurs

When asked how the residents of the proposed colony would find employment Mr. Lane said they would work in Chicago and when asked what about transportation? he said the Illinois Central would build a spur from Matteson to the colony, upon which Mr. McGlashen remarked that he owned 1,000 acres of land in Frankfort and that this was more than the railroad would do for him even tho he knows the officials personally. Mr. Lane is said to have remarked that the Rock Island might build a spur over from Tinley Park. He predicted that within the next 5 or 10 years the colony would have a city of 30,000 to which even Joliet then could not compare.

Looks Like a Flim Flam Game

A visit was next made to the office of Gustave Buckhardt, the realtor who handled the deal between the Scheer's and the Harberer Co. This realtor showed the investigators communications from Mrs. Rahm regarding the farm deal. He was asked for a copy of the contract and trust agreement, but he deemed it inadvisable to do so at the time but promised to mail out the copies requested later.

Next Att. Krusemark saw Scheer in Milwaukee and he said his sister had engineered the deal. Buckhardt came to him (Scheer) and told him he had a buyer for his share of the farm who would pay $175 per acre but that he had a still better pro-

DISCOVERING THE LAZY BUG

HOOKWORM disease is caused by the presence in the bowels of many little worms. These worms are called hookworms, because they have fine, sharp hooks in their heads by which they fasten themselves to the lining of the bowels, so that they can suck blood from the victim's veins. These worms are only about an inch long and about as big as a fine hairpin. The amount of blood which each worm can suck is not very great, but when the unfortunate person who has these worms has hundreds or thousands of them to feed, the loss is so great as to make the victim pale and weak, just like any other form of hemorrhage.

Hookworm disease has long been known to be common among the miners and tunnel workers in Italy and Switzerland. But it was not supposed to exist in this country. In 1900, after the Spanish-American war, when this country took charge of Porto Rico, the surgeon general of the army sent Capt. Bailey Ashford down there to report on the health of the people. He found that, in that beautiful, tropical paradise, there was not much sickness, such as is ordinarily found, but that a great many natives were pale, listless and without energy, that many of them were "clay eaters" and seemed unable to do anything.

Doctor Ashford had seen some cases of hookworm in Europe and was struck by the resemblance between the two conditions. He began to look for hookworms and soon found them in large numbers. He made a report to the surgeon general on anemia in Porto Rico, which was the beginning of our knowledge of this disease in America.

Then Dr. Charles W. Stiles of the United States Public Health service began to study the poor whites in the South. These people had been considered too lazy to work, living in old and miserable cabins, many of them dirt eaters. Doctor Stiles found that they were not lazy but sick. Too sick to work, with their bodies drained of nearly all their blood by these miserable hookworms.

Some of you may remember how the newspapers, 20 years ago, poked fun at Doctor Stiles as the discoverer of the "lazy bug." But Doctor Stiles was right.

Soon the Rockefeller Foundation became interested and began working with the federal government and the state and county health officers to stamp out these hookworms. Millions of dollars have been spent and much has been done, though much remains to be done.

Hookworms enter the body through the skin, generally the skin of the feet. They cause a swelling and eruption called ground itch, dew itch, cow itch or foot itch.

If you want to avoid hookworms, don't go barefooted in parts of the country where they are numerous.

GROWING PAINS

ONE of the time-honored superstitions of mothers is that children have "growing pains." Just how did the idea originate that growth was painful? Growth is a natural, normal, healthy process of the body. Pain is unnatural and abnormal. Any pain, anywhere, at any time is a sign that something is wrong. Any child that has a pain in an arm, a leg, or the back that is anything more than temporary has something wrong somewhere.

Pain is the body's danger signal, just like a red light on a railroad track. Never run past a red light. It is one of the most important rules the engineer must learn and obey. Don't neglect a pain, is a rule that every mother and nurse should heed. There are no such things as "growing pains." If a child has persistent pain anywhere, it means, generally, that there is some kind of infection somewhere that is producing poisons that are irritating the nerves and causing the pain.

This infection may come from the bowels, due to constipation. It may come from infected teeth or tonsils. It may be the first symptoms of rheumatism or heart disease. But rheumatism and heart disease in most cases are the result of infections.

Enlarged and diseased tonsils and adenoids are responsible for most cases of rheumatism. This disease is especially common in the spring and fall. It first shows itself by vague pains in the joints and muscles, later by swellings, redness and tenderness in the joints. The germs or poisons in the blood cause irritation, not only of the joints but also of the lining of the heart. This irritation may be so severe as to produce little ulcers on the heart walls and valves, which, even if they heal, form scars which pull the valves out of shape and out of position, leaving the child with a permanently disabled heart which he has to live with the rest of his life.

Any child who has "growing pains" or any persistent pain should be carefully examined for infected teeth and tonsils. The heart should be carefully watched, as the great majority of cases of heart trouble begin in childhood.

Indians Gay in Buckskin Clothes

The annual tanning party held by Flathead Indians on the western boundary of Glacier National park has become a holiday event. The braves having "brought down" the animals with unerring "gun barrel sight" only have to "look" after the paposes and children, while the squaws transform the hairy pelts into material for shelter and raiment—mostly holiday raiment in these modern days, for most of them live in houses and wear woolen clothing in their everyday agricultural life.

The United States Indian department indulges the red man in this custom, for without the finery of beaded buckskin clothes, the gala events on reservations would be robbed of the very background which gives them their impetus.

Old Theory Shattered

Prof. Franz Wutz of Germany has collected what he calls newly found facts about the Hebrew Bible. He has with his claims shattered the old theory that the Greek-Alexandrian translation of the Old Testament known as the Septuaginta, is derived from original Hebrew text. He says the Septuaginta is largely a reproduction of Hebrew words written with Greek letters and that as early as 200 B. C. Jewish scholars utilized Greek-Hebrew texts for their translations into Greek. His claim opens up an entirely new vista on old biblical literature.

Good Idea Spreading

That parent-teacher associations are valued by public-school officials becomes every year more apparent. An official inquiry conducted in Massachusetts showed that 112 superintendents consider parent-teacher associations a vital factor in promoting closer relations between the home and the school, and 82 superintendents rely upon these associations for support of programs for educational improvement.

Therefore, all electric lamp bulbs and fixtures should be cleaned thoroughly and regularly.

HO! FOR THE LIFE OF A COWBOY

(From a drawing by N. C. Wyeth in Scribner's Magazine.)

Ever eat beans ("Mexican strawberries") dished up from a chuck wagon? Ever sleep out with a saddle for a pillow? It's a great life—if you like it, say the cowboys.

Thousands of Americans, who want to see how real western cowhands live and play, are planning to attend the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo beginning August 15. Cowboys from every part of the West will be on hand for this great western spectacle, which will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. For nine days Chicago's big Grant Park Stadium will look like a scene from the "Covered Wagon days" as the scores of expert bronk riders, lariat throwers and steer wrestlers show their stuff while competing for $30,000 prize money and world championship titles. Tex Austin, who has staged so many successful contests, including the great international contest at Wembley, England, will direct the Chicago event.

Federation

"To form a more perfect union" was the animating thought of the statesmen who met to draft America's constitution. Their problem was to weld the sections they represented into a political entity that would function most efficiently and enduringly in the service of the people.

A similar problem was presented nearly a century later to the organizers of America's telephone service. Licenses under the first patents were being granted to isolated companies that were forming to introduce local service. "A more perfect union" of these companies seemed, from the beginning of the telephone's adoption by the people, to be essential, and so the structure of the Bell System was planned.

This organization exists today substantially as it was then conceived,—a group of companies, each preserving its individuality and applying local knowledge to local needs, but all federated into a single cohesive union in order that nation-wide, universal service may be provided.

FOOD FOR CHILDREN WHO TRAVEL

Many times, and especially during the summer months, mothers are forced to take their children on trips with them. During these trips, the parent is forced to contend with that ever-present and serious problem of food for the child.

As in almost every other case, the chief source of worry, during these periods, is the milk supply, its source, its purity and its food value. It is not always convenient to get market milk of dependable quality for, in many sections of the country, adequate facilities for its care are not provided. To meet the needs of mothers in these trying situations, science has provided a form of milk, conveniently carried and easily prepared. The cans are in two sizes, the one containing six ounces and the other sixteen.

Evaporated milk is just pure cows' milk with more than half of the water removed. None of its food value is lessened; in fact its digestibility is improved. It is easily mixed with water and is, undoubtedly, the most practical form of milk for use as a food for children. Some of the country's leading pediatricians recommend its use, employing the following formula:

From Sixth Week to Third Month.

Milk, evaporated 6 ounces
Lime water 3 ounces
Milk sugar 2 ounces
Bottled water 26 ounces
Seven feedings in twenty-four hours; 4 to 6 ounces at three-hour intervals during the day and four-hour intervals at night.

From Third Month to Fifth Month.

Milk, evaporated 7½ ounces
Lime water 3 ounces
Milk sugar 2 ounces
Bottled water 29½ ounces
Six feedings in twenty-four hours; 5 to 6 ounces at three-hour intervals during the day and a feeding at 10 p. m.

From Fifth to Seventh Month.

Milk, evaporated 10 ounces
Lime water 3 ounces
Milk sugar 2 ounces
Bottled water 29 ounces
Five feedings in twenty-four hours; 6 to 7 ounces at four-hour intervals; the last feeding to be given at 10 p. m.

From Seventh to Ninth Month.

Milk, evaporated 11 ounces
Lime water 3 ounces
Milk sugar 2 ounces
Bottled water 35 ounces
7 to 9 ounces at four-hour intervals during the day. Last feeding at ten at night.

From Ninth to Twelfth Month.

Milk, evaporated 12 ounces
Lime water 3 ounces
Milk sugar 2 ounces
Bottled water 34 ounces
8 to 9 ounces at four-hour intervals during the day. Last feeding at ten at night.

STOP WASTING—OR FACE PAUPERISM

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President, American Bankers Association

The American standard of living, the highest in the world, came easily in the past from the abundance of our natural wealth, but it can be maintained in the future only by drastic national economy in the use of that wealth. We have grown up to our resources. We can not afford to waste them any longer. Industri-ally we have got to stop wasting, but even more so have we got to stop the wastefulness of our personal habits. The paramount challenge to education in America today calls for the effective teaching of personal economics—for education in the management of personal incomes so that they will give every individual a good living during his productive years and provide certain security for the non-productive years of his old age.

Forty-four million people, two-fifths of our population, are gainfully employed in the United States, earning more than $60,000,000,000 annually. The management of the expenditure of this $60,000,000,000 annual pay check is the biggest and most important business in America. It has been estimated that upwards of $10,000,000,000 of this personal income is wasted annually. More than a billion, it is estimated, disappears in foolish speculation in fake schemes.

The spirit of waste in America is a heritage of the past, but today the country has more than one hundred and fourteen million people to support and no nation's resources can withstand extravagance indefinitely. An increase in population will mean a reduced average of personal wealth unless intelligent management maintains a progressively more economic utilization of the national income.

To teach our people this is the task of education and it can not begin to meet the task a moment too soon. The advance of civilization makes man's existence a more and more serious business. Human responsibilities and duties increase each year. If progress has made life more abundant it has also made it more expensive. It is impossible for most men to increase their real wages. Therefore they must meet their added responsibilities out of more economic employment of what they get.

The schools must teach our young people so to manage their own personal affairs as to insure that they lead lives that have an economic worth to society and to themselves. Business must provide plans for its workers to enable them not only to earn but also to save so that the teaching of the schools will not prove an illusion in practice. Do these things and we will have no pauperism in America. Neglect to do them and we will ultimately develop pauperism,—a nation's worst social crime.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON HAVING MONEY ON HAND

"Aunt, why is it such a good thing to have cash in the bank?" asked Jane of Aunt Emmy. "Mr. Wilkins was talking to father yesterday and he said that every one ought to have a certain amount of cash on hand."

"He meant that if you keep some of your money in the bank where it can be had any time you might be able to use it to excellent advantage," said Aunt Emmy. "Every now and then a good opportunity presents itself to make a nice profit in some business deal if you only have the cash on hand so you can act quickly. Don't you remember about that quarrel the Brown brothers had over their inheritance and to settle it sold that house in Center Street? Old Peter Haskins bought it in for $3,000 and the next week sold it for $4,200. If he hadn't had the cash on hand he never could have made that handsome profit."

"Yes, Aunt, that's all right for Mr. Haskins, but I'm never likely to have $3,000 or $4,000 on hand."

"Well there are other little ways to make a profit," said Aunt Emmy. "For instance, you can always benefit by cash discounts. That is, if some one asks you to pay, say $100 for a thing, you can usually get it for less, sometimes ten per cent less, if you pay at once in cash. You always should have some of your money in cash so that you can take advantage of golden opportunities and cash discounts."—A. B. Aymes.

BANKERS HELP

Mason County, Mich., bankers are backing the county move to replace scrub stock with purebred cattle. The plan as outlined by the county agent is to purchase young purebred sires and place them wherever a farmer is found who is willing to undertake the proposition. The bankers will advance the purchase price and take a note for one year without interest. The idea is to make it as easy as possible for the farmers to procure thoroughbreds.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

THE GOSPEL IN LYSTRA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 14:1-28.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Heals a Lame Man.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Stoned at Lystra.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Going Forward in the Face of Difficulties.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Tribulations and Triumphs of Missionaries.

I. Paul and Barnabas Preaching at Iconium (vv. 1-7).

Their experience here was similar to that at Antioch. They entered the Jewish synagogue and preached, causing a multitude of Jews and Gentiles to believe. The unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles to the most bitter opposition.

1. Their Manner of Preaching (v. 1).

This is suggested by the little word "so" in verse one. They so spake that a great multitude believed. They were true preachers. Only that which brings conviction of sin and induces decisions for Christ can be truly called preaching in the Biblical sense. It is not enough to merely bring the truth to the people. It must be brought in such a way that men and women will decide for Christ. This is also true of the Sunday school teacher.

2. Their Attitude Towards Opposition (v. 3).

This is suggested by the word "therefore." Long time therefore they tarried. The opposition did not prevent their preaching, but incited them to continue preaching.

3. The Lord Accompanied Their Preaching With Miracles (v. 3).

Since the opposition was so fierce, the Lord granted special help which was needed.

4. The Effect of Their Preaching (v. 4).

The multitude of the city was divided. Where men faithfully preach the gospel, there will be division.

5. Paul and Barnabas Assaulted (vv. 5-7).

The Jews and the Gentiles united in this assault. Being apprised of their effort, they fled to Lystra and Derbe.

II. An Attempt to Worship Paul and Barnabas as Gods (vv. 8-18).

1. The Occasion (vv. 8-10).

It was the healing of the lame man. God's gracious power shown in healing this lame man occasioned a new difficulty. That which ought to have been a help was turned into a hindrance. This was a notable miracle. The man was a confirmed cripple. He had never walked. On hearing Paul preach, faith was born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that he trusted Christ, he called with a loud voice that all could hear for the man to stand upright. The cure was instantaneous for he leaped up and walked (v. 10).

2. The Method (vv. 11-13).

Barnabas they called Jupiter and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker. The priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands ready to offer sacrifice unto these men (v. 13).

3. Their Efforts Frustrated (vv. 14-18).

This foolish act was happily averted by the tact of the apostles.

(1) They denied that they were divine beings, and declared that to worship beings with like passions to themselves was criminal.

(2) They directed the people to turn away from these vain things unto the living God who made heaven and earth, and has left witness of Himself in that He has always done good, giving rain and fruitful seasons, and filling their hearts with gladness.

III. The Stoning of Paul (vv. 19-22).

Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with relentless hate to this place where they stirred up the very people who were willing to worship them a little while before. This shows that satanic worship can soon be turned into satanic hate. This hatred took form in stoning Paul and dragging him out of the city for dead. God raised him up, and with undaunted courage, he pressed on with his missionary duties, bearing the good tidings to the lost.

IV. The Organization of Churches in the Field (vv. 23-28).

Evangelization with Paul did not mean a hasty and superficial preaching of the gospel, but the establishment of a permanent work. Elders were appointed in every church. The work of the missionary is not done until self-governing and self-propagating churches are established on the field.

Seeing Christ in Men

St. Vincent de Paul made it a rule of his life to be always looking for the Christ in every man he saw or met. When that is a master-thought in anyone, in that person all men see Christ.—Dr. R. F. Horton.

Our Destiny

We make our destiny by our thinking, and the only determinism in nature is furnished by the verdict of the mind. The course of history is the course of thought.—Harold Begbie.

SYNOPSIS

Out of uniform, at the end of the World war, with the rank of major, Peter DeWolfe, young American of wealth and family, is urged by an English comrade in arms, Eversby Benham, to visit the Benham home and meet the Englishman's mother and sister, and, incidentally, Brena Selcoss, young woman about whom there is an air of mystery. Muriel Benham, Eversby's sister, becomes infatuated with Peter, but he is interested only in the mysterious Brena Selcoss. The feeling between Peter and Brena ripens into love. Brena confesses that she is married and that her husband has "vanished." Brena's life story is out of the ordinary. Her father had been forced to leave Greece because of revolutionary affiliations, and his death, following quickly upon that of his wife, leaves Brena penniless, at Dallas, Texas. She secures work, and meets Jim Hennenpin. He falls in love with her. He urges her to meet him in St. Louis. Brena returns to Dallas alone. Compton Parmalee, Hennenpin's employer, tells Brena Hennenpin's intentions toward her were dishonorable. Parmalee makes Brena an offer of marriage. After reflection, she accepts the offer. They are married. At the railroad station, immediately following the ceremony, Parmalee is seized with apparently uncontrollable fear.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

He said, "You forget!" He was in a towering anger.

"No, I don't," Brena replied quietly.

"You bought me."

She picked up a novel, read its title and dropped it suddenly, as she said, "Yes, you bought me—the bargain of giving me a life for growth and in return I was to be your companion. You asked for no more than that and to have me come back to some sweetness of spirit for which you longed. Well, I've given you nothing more than you bought. And nothing less. For I've tried."

He looked up quickly, turned his ear toward her and then, having listened, stared at the ceiling.

"I was wrong," he said. "A brutish moment. I only meant that there is something, of course—my nerves, no doubt—a decay."

"It would be unfair for me not to say more," said Brena.

He folded his small, cold hands upon the open book in his lap and stared.

"You do not mean that some man—"

"No."

"I couldn't tell, of course. A bargain is a bargain. The truth is that I would be joyful if you were made happy. I expect that. But I couldn't know its approach. Your circles and mine are no longer the same. You are ripening still—a wonderful miracle!"

"You have no circle," said Brena.

"No," said he. "I have no circle."

"There are times when I wonder whether this new turn in our lives is not connected in some way with me."

"New turn?"

"Yes!" She was vehement. "This thing which hangs over us like a guillotine blade. This thing which makes you go about wrapped in your chills of fear. This thing which makes your eyes flicker from side to side as if every street corner were an ambush. The thing which makes you afraid to be alone."

"What if it were?" he said. "It is possible, isn't it? It is possible that a person might carry around in their trail some strange destiny. There might be some extraordinary forces behind you, mightn't there? It is possible that some tragic end awaits all men who bind their lives with yours."

Brena opened wide her dark eyes.

"That is enough," she said.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to leave you, Compton," she said.

If she had spoken these lines in the theatrical emphasis with which they are spoken by several hundred women in each thousand sooner or later, as wise a man as Compton Parmalee would have laughed in her face. It was only necessary to know Brena to know that if she said these words it would be with a calm, a sureness, a regretful sorrow all combined in the tone of her voice and the expression in her eyes that would carry conviction. Compton was convinced.

The idea knocked him onto his knees. He came half crawling, stumbling, struggling up toward her.

"No, no! No, no, Brena—for God's sake!" he whimpered. "For the love of Christ don't leave me!"

At her feet he shampooed his hair as in an imaginary basin until its sparse growth had been rumpled under the palms of his clutching, twitching hands.

"Well, then never speak of any mystery trailing upon my heels," she had said. "Never bring this insinuation that a curse follows me. You have had your chance to be free of it and instead of wanting me to go you want me to stay. I loathe dramatics, Compton. This is the Twentieth and not the Twelfth century and those who now attempt to raise superstitions will fare badly if others believe as I do. Get up!"

He stood. With his eyes indicating humiliation through the terror which still lingered in his face, he arose and walked toward the door.

"Very well," he said at last in cold, hard syllables. "You shall not hear of it again. Forget it. Call it a mad and foolish thing. My lips are sealed. But the time will come. There are stranger things in the world than you know."

He closed the door and left her alone, somewhat shaken; and in spite of all that she had said, somewhat eager to ask him more. If she had, he would have pressed his thin lips tight and said nothing. He did this on later occasions, he had made up his mind to wrestle with his fears, whatever they might be, alone. His physician told Brena confidentially that Compton Parmalee was suffering only from a mild form of neurasthenia in which dread had attached itself to some particular chain of morbid thoughts.

In March Parmalee conceived the idea that he was being followed. He spoke of it several times and Brena laughed.

"Why should any one follow you?" she inquired scornfully. "You tell me that you understand why I am followed sometimes on my way home from the studio, but I can't see the same explanation for your being followed."

He was not amused.

"Then report it to the police," she said.

"The police?"

"Yes."

"What a suggestion!"

She heard no more, however, of his morbid suspicion; no one was following him she was convinced. And yet the unknown terror, of which he would now say nothing, infected her so that the cloth of each day had woven into it some threads of fear, in a crazy, senseless, indistinct pattern.

A crisis came on one of those warm evenings which descend suddenly upon the chill of the winter and tell of an impatient, hasty, headlong spring, which has crept up through the open country and comes at dusk to the gates of the cities. Some musical performance, long since forgotten by Brena, took the pair out until nearly eleven and Parmalee wanted to walk home through the moonlight. A sleepy elevator man took them up in a chaste, white and gold car to their apartment door.

"Good-night," said Brena. "Good-night, Compton. You seemed to-night more like yourself."

He laughed and waved to her as she went down the corridor to her chambers. She switched on the wall lights of her dressing room, bedroom and bath, and undressed leisurely before the long mirror, looking about her as her memory took her back to the hot room under the roof at Mrs. Wilkie's with its yellow varnished woodwork and its plaster walls, stained a hideous thermic orange, its little red ants that no eradicator ever eradicated and the screams of the baby coming out of a window in the next house. Nothing in the luxurious quarters she now occupied could remind one of Mrs. Wilkie's unless it were the picture of the Acropolis that had belonged to Brena's father, still in its battered frame and hanging above her bed.

And yet she stopped braiding her red-brown hair as one of those strange calls of wistful longing for the past, even for the tragic or the sordid past, that comes to all of us, came to her.

No one would credit her with remembering some few years afterward the exact contents of her thoughts at this moment, were it not a fact that the thought itself had been interrupted and therefore engraved by three quick successive pistol shots.

They came and went as revolver cracks do behind heavy closed doors with a muffled thudding; she knew what they were. They were followed by a little crash as of a vase falling.

Her first thought was that Parmalee had killed himself. Perhaps if her mind had been less active she would have screamed, flung open the door and rushed out, expecting the horrors of a suicide; she remembered, however, that there had been three shots, more than the number usually fired by one who seeks destruction. Brena concluded that whatever the menace her husband had feared, it now had proved its reality. She had said since that, for the moment, she at least believed, and even in her startled breathing she formed the words, "It is some fault of mine."

The turning out of her own lights disclosed the fact that the corridor beyond the crack under her own door was dark also. From it came no sound, except for the distant purr of the elevator taking up some yawning after-theater homecomers. Brena could only hear her own heart.

Without the dangerous background of light behind her, she opened the door cautiously and the moon's rays on the carpet beneath her feet went forward across the carpet in the corridor like sliding fingers.

"Stand back, Brena. Don't get between me and him. He's at the end of the hall." It was the voice of her husband. "Look out. I'm going to turn on the lights!"

A sudden rush of illumination filled the corridor.

"You are a fool!" said Brena.

"I?"

"You have shot the glass out of this picture." She pointed to the large photographic print of "The Man With the Glove" that had been the one wedding present sent after them from Dallas by a Jewish cotton broker, once one of Parmalee's bitter rivals. It had been the subject of Brena's comment that the donor gave it in celebration of Parmalee's retirement from business rather than of his marriage, and she, disliking pictures on general principles, had hung it where it would be seen the least.

"I thought it was him," said Parmalee, coming forward with the revolver still in his hand.

"Him?" asked Brena. "Who, then?"

"Why, a burglar," he said, still quivering with excitement.

"You saw only your own moving reflection on the glass mixed into this figure which you've decorated with three bullet holes," she said.

A knocking and ringing had begun at the elevator door of the apartment. "Anything wrong, sir?" asked a voice outside.

"No, no," Parmalee answered, feeling his way back till he could lean against the wall.

"Very good, sir."

Brena, who probably appeared more like a Grecian goddess than ever in the white drapery of her night attire, walked to Parmalee with deliberation and took the revolver from his hand.

"Where did this come from?" she asked.

"I bought it."

"When?"

"A month ago."

"A month ago? Why?"

"I don't know. There are always intruders."

"Compton, you are a sick man," she was living a miserable life.

"You are a sick and unnerve"

"There is nothing worse than fear. It is more horrible than the thing it dreads."

"I've often thought that—yes, I have!" he said. "I've often thought I'd be driven to find out."

"Tell me," she commanded.

He shut tight his thin lips.

She came closer and put her hands upon his shoulders as if she were a mother about to give a child a good shaking.

"The city is bad for you, Compton," she said. "You are quivering yourself to pieces over some absurd apprehension. We must go outside somewhere—a house, a garden—quiet."

He appeared as if he were about to fall apart. He almost blubbered. He said, "Thank God you've said that, Brena. We must go where I can escape, if there is a chance to escape. You're right. It's got my nerve."

"What?"

"Yes, what?" he whimpered. "That's it. But we must go—where you said. I'll pull myself together. And Brena—"

"Yes."

"If anything does happen to me—"

"Yes."

"—you're not to blame—not in the sense that it's your own will. Do you understand? I'm trying to be a man. Can't you see. In the morning—"

She looked at him in disgust; for the first time she felt a pang of hate.

Within thirty days he had purchased a great gloomy house up the Hudson. It had been built in the seventies by some affluent banker with a taste for squares. The house was square, the rooms in it were spacious, lofty, hollow-sounding cubes, and the garden was square in a square area which stained itself and the house within a high brick wall painted a slate gray to match the house and with a great decorated iron gate which could be closed at night. The upper windows looked out in summer upon the tossing branches of old trees growing out of vast, damp bald spots on the lawn and in winter upon the stark boughs and the silver of the Hudson river. The place was in a slight hollow in a hill top, isolated, glowering, without the flavor of old places lived in richly and warmly, but suggesting questionings as to which room the family had used to die in, and forecasting nights when the wind would howl around the corners of the French roof.

Parmalee had a coping of concrete, filled with broken glass, built all around the top of the wall. He had ordered iron bars for the lower windows, and a bill for an elaborate electric burglar-alarm system was on his desk the morning that he disclosed to Brena that he had bought her a house.

"At last you have a home," said he.

CHAPTER X

The retreat into the walled estate which perched like a great cube of gray gloom among the twisted old trees overlooking the Hudson river gave little relief to the secret fears of Compton Parmalee.

For a few months, to be sure, he showed lively interest in the rehabilitation of the place. Brena, who after a long struggle with her conscience had made up her mind to stand by her extraordinary husband, found herself wondering often enough whether his interest was not like her own, a sham erected out of a sense of duty by one to deceive the other. During this first period of their terrible existence there, she built up a slender tottering hope that she might, as she had agreed, reclaim him. She had formulated a policy and to this policy she would cling with all the tenacity of which she was capable.

Her policy had been formed with full knowledge of the fact that it would be hard to follow. Her own nature revolted against mysteries and superstitions and fears of unrealities. Her husband had not even given her grounds to assert that these were the basis for his morbid panics, but he had, by malice or inadvertence, created a dim picture of some menace, some secret human conspiracy, some strange force, which pursued to the death any man unlucky enough to have meddled with her destiny. At times it was difficult for her to escape, by the exercise of common sense, a haunting idea that there was some foundation for this apparent absurdity. As she said: "It is just so with all things. The confidence of knowledge isn't half as much based on a person's possession of the facts as because one has freedom at last from the fear that there is so much that one doesn't know." But she disliked herself for her own uncertainties.

A choice was open to her between turning her back upon Parmalee's fears and setting out by systematic and persistent observation and cross questioning to uncover them. It was not because the latter course was difficult that she rejected it; it was not because, little by little, he had built a wall around his own thoughts which not only excluded him from social contact but excluded her from his inner life; it was not because of his increasing irritability when questioned, nor finally was it because he always, in the end, made her feel that he was trying to spare her from some dreadful knowledge, and some overhanging curse that was upon her. She chose to neglect the terror that had seized him because she felt that if sufficient neglect were heaped upon it, it would gradually die. Often enough in years that were to follow she wished with all her being that she had not allowed herself to remain in the dark.

She wished often enough after the end came that she had at least kept her eyes open, but there were incidents which drew her attention by the very force of their being extraordinary or bizarre.

Evenings spent in the high studded chambers of this austere abode that none of her decorative skill, given free play by Parmalee's money, could rescue from their brooding gloom were far from cheerful. The temper of her husband forbade entertainment and, try as he did, there was no comfort for him in his efforts to converse with Brena—efforts which like the squeezing of the juice from a sour fruit produced less the more the pressure had been applied. Within a year he had developed an insatiable appetite for his studies of the history of the Southwest, his collecting of books and manuscripts bearing upon the ancient civilization and tribes of Central America, Mexico and the tangent region of the United States where the painted deserts are, and his compilation of data that bore in any way upon the comparison of the Inca, the Aztec and the Yucatan civilizations with those of Egypt, Greece and Persia. There is still in existence, covered with dust, a pile of manuscript in his own handwriting which, it appears, was the beginning of a work upon a subject that only his interest qualified him to attempt. A speculator, gambler, cotton broker and commission agent, as Brena has said, does not bring to a pretentious scientific work the orderly mind, the ease of expression nor the realization of its magnitude that one might expect in a professor, for instance. He might better have spent his time in furnishing to his beautiful young wife a companionship of some kind, no matter how inadequate, but he had closed himself in a ghastly shell of his own. Sometimes for days she did not see him at all and only knew of his presence in his library by his fits of coughing.

Brena, committed to waiting for the conclusive end to this distorted existence, which something within told her destiny would bring, found refreshment only in her days. When morning came there was an escape; she could go by train or motor to the city. Though she found among the persons she met and those who worked with her in the Forest pottery, founded with her own money, that she (a grim joke) was looked upon distantly as a young, rich, contented wife, she drank down long drafts of the pleasures of creative labor and of the patronage she was able to give to young women whose talents deserved development. Her activity would have been sufficient, however, if it had served only to submerge the memories of nights alone in her two great rooms when the wind played mournful melodies as if on the bars of moonlight that fell through the gates of Parmalee's estate and across the damp lawn from which, winter and summer, there arose the odors of decay and death.

If the idea that she was wasting her rare youth, her marked beauty and the full capacities of her womanhood sometimes oppressed her, she at least kept her peace. Something of firmness, not there before, began to appear upon her face. Probably no mirror could have shown her as clearly the woman she was throwing away as the portrait of her painted during this period by young Sydenham, had just come over from England.

He succeeded, it was said, in expressing in his colors and bold method that extraordinary combination in Brena which gave her the atmosphere of the permanence of a temple and yet the shimmer of a golden moment, come and gone in a warm transitory glow beneath her cream-colored skin, a glimmer of light from her golden-red hair, or some almost imperceptible flexure of her sensitive lips.

Parmalee, urged by his wife, saw this portrait when young Sydenham had finished it. He thrust his glances at it in his usual way and several times turned one ear toward the picture as if inviting words from it.

"A person!" he said. "And most of her is there—a good deal of her soul. A glorious piece of color—a massive glow, and yet her eyes—they are the masters of the canvas. That is astonishing."

Of course Sydenham beamed. He fed upon admiration—as much, perhaps, upon that which came to him because he was one of those men who may be called a beautiful youth and their daughters, as upon the praises for his extraordinary art.

"Well, I shall buy it," Parmalee had said with a sudden unannounced determination for which Brena was unprepared. She showed it by the astonishment in her eyes.

Sydenham smiled. He said: "But, Mr. Parmalee, it was the understanding with Mrs. Parmalee that I was to exhibit the picture. All things considered, it is the best thing I have ever done. I have planned to exhibit my things rather widely in America. Shall I say that I am going on tour across the country? After exhibiting—why then—of course—"

Parmalee's face contorted. He wet his lips.

"You have a price," he snapped out. Sydenham, the self-confident, the whimsical, the theatrical youth, waved his pale hand.

"At present there is no price, Mr. Parmalee," he said.

The cotton broker pulled at his collar rim as if he had need of air.

"What have you proposed as the title of this picture?"

"Why—the name—Mrs. Parmalee—"

"That's foolish, Sydenham," Compton said. "I'm prejudiced in favor of the name Parmalee, but even I know better than to exhibit a picture under the title Mrs. Smith Jones or even Mrs. Parmalee."

Famous "Dunmow Fitch"

In the town of Dunmow, Essex, England, Robert Fitz-Walter offered, in 1244, to present a fitch of bacon to married couples who would take oath that they had never once during the year wished themselves unmarried and had avoided a quarrel. It was not until 1445 that the fitch was awarded for the first time.

Public Baths for Dogs

In Munich, Bavaria, public baths for dogs have been established and are being maintained by the local authorities out of public taxes. This was thought necessary, due to the great number of unclean canines that were noticeable on the streets since the war. The baths are open from 9:30 a. m. to 7 p. m. and they are widely used by pet owners.

The oil gauge is on your car because automobile manufacturers know that lubrication is one of the most important factors in motor service.

Watch your oil gauge. See how fast the oil you are using thins out after 3 or 4 hundred miles. Then try Monamotor Oil and see the difference. This oil gauge test alone will show you the marked supremacy of Monamotor Oil.

Poetry Profitable

"Had a queer experience recently," said the Billville poet. "Robbers held me up on the highway. Didn't have a cent in my pocket—only a poem which I was takin' to the editor."

"Didn't take the poem, did he?"

"No. Read three lines of it, handed it back to me and said, 'Friend, here's two bob. You need it worse than I do.'"—Northern Daily Mail.

Frankfort Objects To Colored Colony

position whereby he could get $500 an acre and then unfolded the colony plan and Mr. Scheer agreed to the terms offered and signed the papers, but without getting a cent of down payment.

Next Attorney Krusemark showed how the standing of the Harberer company was investigated and it was found that judgments aggregating thousands of dollars had already been awarded various parties against this company and their financial standing is very doubtful.

The Gainers and the Losers

Attorney Krusemark further declared that the only ones benefitting by this are the real estate dealer who is to get $25 per acre commission and Harberer & Co., who are to sell the lots to the poor negro for $500 a lot and after he had bought a lot he would find him self in a jam and unable to unload and would lose what he had paid. Soon as any lots are sold in this colony, Frankfort property values will decrease 50 per cent, the attorney declared. He also showed that if the colony got a foothold, which he said he felt they would not, it would mean the colored voters then would control town politics and eventually the county.

Attorney Krusemark read a letter he received from realtor Buckhardt in which he said he could not send copies of the papers he had promised as both Mr. Lane and Mr. Harberer were bitterly opposed to him doing so and anyway it was none of Frankfort's business what the nature of the deal is and that Frankfort would be a second Dayton, Tenn., with Bryan and Darrow making speeches.

Attorney Krusemark in no uncertain terms painted the Buckhardt, Harberer and Lane crowd as a tricky bunch who would sell out anyone they got in their meshes. He showed how hard the forebears of the community had worked to make this community what it is for their posterity to enjoy and warned the people of Frankfort not to allow anything to enroach upon the community that would destroy its values as the proposed colony will do. He also reviewed the Chamberlain and Liberia incident in New Lenox township.

Next R. L. Gasternau, president for the past seven years of the Kenwood and Hyde Park Property Owners Protective Association spoke on how the Association prevented the colored folks from settling on the Lake Front as they had aimed to do. He referred to them as black birds and said should anyone of these "blackbirds" attempt to land in the restricted section, he would quickly lose his feathers. He advocated segregation of the colored race. He did not condemn the negro entirely, but said some men who had a white face had a heart blacker than the negro and that such schemers should be taken to the middle of the lake and forgotten. He said if Frankfort did not keep the "blackbirds" out of their community they were cowards and the crowd roared its approval of the sentiments he expressed. He said if need be Chicago would come down and help Frankfort get rid of the "blackbirds". He urged a co-operative community spirit and requested the community to back up their leaders. He showed that the colored man can never be on the same plane with the white man on the equality basis.

Dr. W. V. Hedges made a stirring and fiery speech in which he declared we need the spirit of 1776 and that anyone who felt that the colored people should reside in the same community with the white people should be sent together with the negroes down below the Mason-Dixon line and he was given a thunderous applause.

The following petition favoring segregation of the colored race was then read by Attorney Krusemark and accepted with a unanimous vote:

Resolution.

WHEREAS: the question of colored colonization, both in city and country has come to a crisis in the State of Illinois,

RESOLVED: that petitions should be prepared and presented to the people of this State for signatures calling for a referendum regarding the segregation of colored communities in accord with constitutional requirements.

Mr. Joseph McGlashen, in an interview with the News-Bulletin said that the State of Kentucky has passed a law segregating the colored communities from the whites and that a fight was made against this law on the grounds that it was unconstitutional, but the Supreme Court ruled it was constitutional so if it was constitutional there, McGlashen said, he saw no reason why it would not be so in Illinois.

Frankfort is not going to tolerate any monkey business in this issue which is considered a very dangerous one for the community, and the colored folks will find Frankfort on the war path and a very determined bunch to deal with.

The committee above named, has secured the existing lease from the present tenant of the Scheer farm which lease holds good until next March, and if any attempt is made by the Liberia promoters to lay out lots or sell lots on this farm, they will be arrested for trespassing.

A large Grand Opening is to be staged on the Scheer farm this coming Sunday and a battle is eminent between the Liberia followers and the Frankfort people. Some fear violence and possible blood shed and race riots.

Jackie Coogan

Is Coming

There comes this Friday to the Orland M. E. church a picture heralded as a "Milestone on the highway of art," and which bears the highest recommendations in its own right. It is "Oliver Twist" starring that adorable child actor of the screen, Jackie Coogan.

The picture is described as the most ambitious in which the juvenile star, Jackie Coogan, has ever appeared, and it is asserted that in it he has registered an appeal that strikes the heart of young and old and of all classes of picture patrons as well as those that are not usually enticed to the theatre. It is the appeal of innocent boyhood through the medium of one of the greatest stories ever penned—Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist". The plot has been followed with unusual fidelity, it is claimed, and the characterizations will satisfy the most enthusiastic of Dickens' readers. "Oliver Twist" is a First National Attraction—listed among the biggest of the year.
